LEAD DUTIES

Amongst the monster deputations row on their way to Ottawa or arranging to go to Ottawa to urge upon the government an increase in the duties is one from the Kootenay district of British Columbia asking for a duty on such lead products as now pay no duty and an increase of duty on those now paying duty. The ground of the appeal is the depressed condition of the lead mining industry of Kootenay. An effort is being made to secure the endorsement of the people of Alberta to the proposition, and the towns of trade of Calgary, Edmonton and no doubt of other places have been asked to endorse the representations to be made by the deputations.

There is no doubt that a depression in the Kootenay mines has an effect upon the farming interests of Alberta, and therefore that anything tending to relieve that depression is worthy of Alberta's endorsement, subject of course to other considerations. The question is: Will the proposed remedy cure the trouble, and if it will effect a cure will the cure be worse than the disease. It is not well for the boards of trade of the people of Alberta generally to lend their name and influence to a movement that may have a directly opposite result from that expected.

In the first place, is the lead mining industry capable of being made prosperous by a protective tariff. British Columbia has probably the richest lead mines in the world, and the most of them. The possibilities of Canadian production are infinitely beyond those of Canadian consumption. In such a case the profit of the mines must depend upon the outside and not on the home demand. Let the home price be put up ever so high by protective duties still the great bulk of the product must be marketed abroad, and therefore the export price must govern the profits of the mines even though the price of the home consumer be artificially increased. For if the home market could take all the lead produced in British Columbia to-day the opening of a new mine—and there are hundreds to be opened—would compel export tomorrow. This principle is recognized in regard to the iron industry, and instead of a protective duty on iron a bounty is paid on its production. There may be a question whether the bounty system in the case of iron is a sound policy or not, but there can be no question about the impolicy of the protective system applied to the similar industry of lead mining.

If the natural conditions are such as do not admit of profitable lead mining in the Kootenay there is only one thing to be done and that is turn the intelligence, capital and industry employed there into some channel that is naturally profitable. But the applicants for lead duties will be the last to admit that there are such conditions.

If the bad conditions are artificial as they claim, means should be found to overcome those artificial conditions. If it is true that the lead mining trust of the United States extends into Canada and dictates the profits of the lead mining industry—is in fact engaged in a process of freezing the water out of the stock of the lead mining companies—it does not appear that a duty on lead or lead products would help the miner. If the trust is able at present to dictate how much the miner shall get for his lead—as it is, and does—without regard to the market price what earthly reason is there for it to allow him any more if a duty were put on. It would be just as easy for the trust to take the duty as it is now for it to take the legitimate profits of the mine. And surely no one is childish enough to suppose that it would do so.

And right here comes in the question: How much would be legitimate profit on the output of a silver lead mine. Everybody knows that since the first prospect holes were bored the history of mining in the Kootenay has been one of the wildest kind of wild cat speculation. Mines that will never be mines are carrying stock to the amount of millions, and the mines that are mines are not in such a very different position. To speculate with capital has been added to the speculation and in many cases dishonest management, and even if there were no smaller trust to cut the profits to the tune of the mines could run they would need to be marvellously rich. That they have kept alive at all is proof of their richness. But as long as that trust remains as powerful as it is now, the mines are at its mercy. And a duty on lead would merely feed the trust; not improve the condition of the mines. Some means to break the power of the trust is needed, but the imposition of a duty which the trust would simply pocket would be the poorest possible way to break its power.

WEDDING AT MILLET.

A very pretty wedding took place at Millet in the church on New Year's day at 1 p. m. The contracting parties being Mr. J. A. Harris, of Peterborough, Ont., ex-member of the N. W. M. P., having just arrived from the Yukon where he has been residing for the past three years, and Miss Georgina Nissen, formerly of Edmonton, now of Millet. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Grosse, Presbyterian minister of Wetaskiwin.

Constable Riddock supported the bridegroom, while Miss Emma Johnson, a niece of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. The bride was very prettily attired in white, veiling trimmed with orange blossoms. After the ceremony the company proceeded amid a shower of rice to the Arlington hotel, where they enjoyed a hearty dinner. And at 4 o'clock amid another shower of rice they boarded the train for Edmonton carrying with them the best wishes and congratulations of their many friends who had come to see them off.

That Dakota Blizzard

St. Paul, Jan. 6.—Meagre reports have reached St. Paul of a terrific blizzard which is raging to-night in South Dakota and moving rapidly eastward. Sioux Falls, S. D., is almost entirely cut off from the world, as but one wire is working between that place and Sioux City, Ia., and is used exclusively by the railroads for train service orders. The storm struck Sioux City soon after dark, starting in with a fine rain which quickly turned to snow. The thermometer sank rapidly and the wind rose almost to a hurricane velocity, one report putting its speed at ninety miles an hour, and before it the snow was driven in sheets, making traffic of any kind almost an impossibility. It is thought railway service will be practically at a standstill by morning and fears are entertained for settlers in the country. Fuel is very scarce in some sections and the cold wave which naturally will follow the blizzard will cause much suffering.

Summit, N. D., Jan. 6.—The worst blizzard since 1888 is now in progress. Snow began to fall early this evening.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 6.—A severe wind storm struck Omaha and portions of Nebraska and Iowa late this afternoon and continued until a late hour. Telegraphic and telephone wires are prostrated, cutting off many towns from communication with the outside world. In this city the wind was of sufficient velocity to do some damage. The temperature is at the freezing point.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 6.—This city is in the midst of a great midwinter hurricane in which the wind reached a velocity of sixty-four miles an hour. Hardly had the state legislature adjourned when the windows in the house and senate chambers were driven in by the wind, the heavy glass in the skylight in the rotunda, narrowly missing several persons. The decorations for the inaugural ball were ruined.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 6.—The wind has been blowing a gale here since four this afternoon. Early in the evening snow fell freely for a short time and there was every appearance of an old fashioned blizzard; but the snowfall stopped and while the wind continued the absence of snow both in the air and on the ground prevented any drifting. Advice from farther west where there is more snow, are that there is a terrible storm raging, and wires are in such shape that no details can be obtained. Trains arrived not much later than usual.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 6.—Supt. Law, of the Northern Pacific, says it will take about ten days to clear the main line of the Northern Pacific between Palmer Junction and Ellensburg. Three westbound passenger trains are between Palmer Junction and Stampede Tunnel; one at Canyon, one at Maywood and one at Lester. Most of the mail passengers came into Tacoma last night, walking from the point where the trains are stalled at Kanassat, and being brought in from there by a special train. The main line is open between Seattle and Portland.

The Coming Railway Subsidy

Hamilton Herald.
Not an acre of land should be allocated except the land over which the road will be built. All the land in the region to be traversed by the railway should be reserved for the settlers. The enormous land grant to the C. P. R. has been a curse to the Northwest, the evil effects of which will be felt for many years to come.

The aid granted should be in the form of the usual cash subsidy of $3,200 per mile. But the conditions upon which the aid is granted should be these: that the government should have the right at any time, after giving due notice, to take possession of the railway and operate it as a public work; that the price to be paid for the property shall be the estimated cost of duplicating it at time of transfer, this estimate to be made by a board of arbit-trators; and that the total amount given by the government in subsidies shall be deducted from the price fixed by the arbitrators.

The Rancher's Lament
 Where the spruce trees' twilight shade
 Hides the spongy, mossy glade,
 Where the muskrats and the beaver hold
 The land;
 Where the muskrats' hut is made,
 And the wild duck's eggs are laid,
 And the hungry coyotes plunder in
 The band;
 Where the wild deer roams the wood,
 And the partridge rears her brood,
 And the beaver throws his dam across
 The stream;
 Where with lavish hand are strewn
 All the wild flowers of the wood,
 And the eagle high above the copse
 Does scream;
 Here I settled by a river,
 When the cold spring winds did shiver,
 When the month of March still pelung
 To winter's snows;
 And I said that here forever
 From mankind my life I'd sever,
 That my stock might roam from
 Spring till autumn's close.
 For the land was hard to clear here,
 And the outlook it was drear here,
 I thought the settler never here would stray,
 Yes, I thought I'd naught to fear here;
 But they've come from far and near here,
 Oh! it's little I know, 'he settler's way!
 For the land is plowed up black
 Where my cattle used to track,
 And the wire fences on all sides block
 The way;
 And my old disused hay rack
 Lies and rots beside my shack,
 For they've tamed the meadows where
 I used to cut my hay.

Oriental Exclusion
 How Wm. Templeman, senator and member of the Laurier government without portfolio in addressing a meeting in Vancouver in the interests of the liberal candidate, R. G. MacPherson is reported as follows:

He spoke as a private individual, but nevertheless could not dissociate himself from the fact that he was a member of the government. His views would be along the lines he had always advocated in his newspaper, and on the platform. He had been all his life, a consistent advocate of the exclusion of Asiatic labor in this country. (Applause). The mere fact that he had become a member of the government had not changed him one iota. His view was that the reason for the disallowance of the British Columbia legislation on the Mongolian question was because it was purely within the jurisdiction of the Dominion government.

The province had nothing to do with such matters. In expressing such an opinion, he merely meant that the little ground had been changed from Victoria to Ottawa. If the legislature had no right to pass a Natal law there was no doubt about the powers of the Dominion to enact such legislation. As far as he was concerned he was prepared to advocate in the councils of the government and in the senate a law along the lines of the Natal act. That had always been his views, and he held the same opinion still. Whether they succeeded or not was another question. In his opinion there was a very strong feeling in the east in favor of more restricted immigration laws, and he was not without hopes that the time would come when they would induce the government to bring down a measure along the lines of the Natal act. He thought that no class of people, he did not care whether they were Chinese, Japanese or Doukhobors, or other aliens, should be allowed to come to this country if they did not assimilate with the people of Canada. On the other hand, to any man who would assimilate, he would say, "Come and settle with us."

Senator Templeman was here asked whether he had the same views regarding Japanese as Chinese. In reply, the speaker said that he included all Mongolians.

Mr. MacPherson, the candidate following Senator Templeman, stated that he was an unqualified opponent to Oriental immigration. He would include the Japanese. "In fact, I am against any sort of immigrants that wear long hair, or who cut their hair and work for the same wages. He considered that the Chinese and Japanese were a curse to the province, and were a stain upon the escutcheon of British Columbia. He would yield the palm to no one on this question. He was against any immigration of that sort. This matter was not one of liberalism and conservatism, but one for British Columbians generally. They had been fighting the issue for years. Mr. Maxwell had harped upon the question and had got the government to appoint a commission, and that only showed what incessant hard labor would do when a man is in sympathy with a cause and had the ear of the government. The government must take action next session and he, himself, would raise the question if he were elected, as a direct issue, and make the members decide themselves on the question. He had nothing to work in this matter. He was an unqualified opponent of Oriental immigration. As such he would be held responsible for his words, and wished to be held responsible.
